1 Hiding Out & Not Being Seen

It's not that you are afraid to be seen by others as much as you are afraid to honestly see yourself. A part of you still feels at war with the masculine and feminine aspects of yourself as well as feeling a separation between the higher and lower aspects of yourself. Learn to see the perfection of it all and see yourself as an evolutionary being.

2 Not Trusting Yourself

As an emerging luminary or a leading edge luminary you are constantly being called to deeper levels of trust. Trust in your mental, emotional and DNA superpowers. I've found that the more I experience and receive validation of my own superpowers the more I trust myself. The more I trust my inner superpowers along with my ability to do things I enjoy, the more fun life is for me.

3 Resitting Support

This is the point that has caused me the more personal pain over the years, I tried to do it all by myself. There were times I thought it was weak to ask for support or to let anyone know I needed help. Now, I reach out to one of my luminary friends, or mentors for the support I need before I start making things really complicated. Ask for support as soon as you feel things are getting hard, or your are struggling. Allow other people's superpowers to be a support to you when you need it.

4 Pursuing The Wrong Desires

As a Leading Edge Luminary, your greatest quest is to know yourself through the service to others. You help people, not because it is the right thing to do, but because it is a part of you to do it. You can't stop yourself from wanting to help raise the vibration of the world around you. Because of this your vibrational state matters more than anything. One of the ways we remain stuck in a current frequency pattern or habit is by pursuing desires which are not truly ours. Get clear on your own desires, but asking yourself, "Who's desire is this?"

5 Forgetting Your Spiritual Practice

When we decide to become leaders, mentors, and guides we sometimes put the doing of our luminary work before the BEING of our luminary work. Honor your spiritual practice by making it a part of your routine. Allow your spiritual practice to support you in all your doing. I have a spiritual practice and a ritual of doing the work of self-appreciation every day. This is my time to be with the Divine within me.

6 Trying To Be A Saint

Part of being a Leading Edge Luminary means your life is a light to others. When you share your struggles and breakthroughs with others it gives them permission to have their own struggles and breakthroughs in their lives. The wisdom of your life experiences makes a bigger impact than keeping up with an appearance of being a Saint.
